A Free Indoor Winter Activity That Is Priceless

Maybe it's that I am coming off of a wonderful sabbatical where I had time to work on some family history projects, which included organizing some fascinating primary documents and interviewing one of my uncles about my mom's side of the family. Maybe it's because I have recently started reading some of our collected family stories to our children before bed – stories about their grandparents and great grandparents that have been written down for precisely this purpose. Maybe it's that whenever I officiate at a funeral, I feel so honored and privileged to hear about your own family stories and sometimes can't help but wonder what stories I will pass on about my own family, or what stories will one day be passed on about me. Maybe it's because we are a few months from celebrating the bat mitzvah of our oldest. Or maybe it's just that I am getting older and, as some of you like to point out to me, a little bit grayer! Whatever the reason, I have been spending a lot of emotional time in the past lately, considering the lives of those who are no longer with us, and working to ensure that their legacy does not end once I am no longer here to tell their story.

By now, most of you know that this is a topic which I return to with some frequency. I once read a piece describing an interview featuring Elie Wiesel (zichrono u'verakha, may his memory live on for a blessing). The interviewer commented that Wiesel seemed 'to live in the past.' To which, Professor Wiesel retorted: 'I don't live in the past. But what can I do - the past lives in me.' That is how I feel a great deal of the time. Each one of us has a rich family history, a tapestry of stories, significant life events, and lessons that have happened to us, to our grandparents, parents, siblings, children, and grandchildren. These stories have, to varying degrees, formed who we are as individuals, instilled within us the values which make us who we are, and have hopefully contributed to enriching our lives and our world for the better. And yet, unfortunately, I don't think this is something that we take a lot of time to consider or discuss, with our partners, siblings, children, and grandchildren.

How many of you have spoken with your family members about questions such as the following in the recent past?

*Who has been the biggest influence on your life? What was your childhood like? Who were your favorite relatives? What are the classic family stories? Do you remember your grandparents? What did you learn from them? What were your parents like and how did they influence your life? Where is your family from and how did they arrive to this country? What are the most important lessons you've learned in life? How did you decide what to study in college? When did you first fall in love? How did you get engaged? When did you first vote and who did you vote for? What was it like when your child was born? How did you get your first job? How did you get your last job? Is there a childhood friend who you lost touch with, but who you will never forget? Where were you when Kennedy was shot? Where were you on September 11th? What book changed the way you look at the world? Do you believe in God? What role does Judaism play in your daily life? Where is your favorite vacation spot? What have you learned from life?*¹

Looking for a way to start writing down some of your stories for your children and grandchildren? Looking for a topic of conversation at the dinner table, or in the car when schlepping kids or grandkids somewhere? Start with this list. Or, even better, with recording and video capabilities now, quite literally, in the palm of our hands, think about recording some answers to these questions (though, not while you are in the car!). If you think "no one is interested," write down some of your thoughts, or make the recordings anyway. Trust me; your loved ones will be grateful one day.

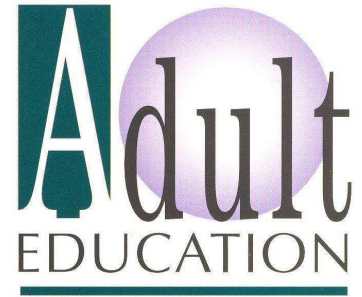

As we settle into the cold days of winter, spending more time indoors with friends, family, and loved ones, why not take a few moments to engage with some family history activities? Take a moment to put down the phone to consider just why it is that many of us on social media have up-to-the-minute information and pictures about our friends and family today, but much less information about those who are no longer around to "share" their story. Sometimes I think we are living too much in the present, and not nearly enough in the past. What would the Facebook feeds of our parents and grandparents have looked like? What would they have "shared" and wanted us to know?

There is no one correct way to approach this sacred work. You might consider the questions above. You might consider using pictures to help jog your memory. You might use this as an excuse to pick up the phone and interview a loved one about their background and their life. Regardless of the medium, you owe it to yourselves, to your children, to your family and to your friends, to share and save your stories; and to retrieve the stories that may soon disappear without your assistance.

Don't wait until you "have time." Set a goal for yourself to have at least two different stories to share at your Passover Seder in a few months. Find a few minutes this week and get started. You will be glad that you did. B'hatzlacha - good luck. As always, I am looking forward to hearing about how this experience went for you.

Rabbi Schonbrun will be leading three different programs from January-May. All classes are free to all congregants, relatives, friends and open to the community.

Discovering Mussar

Mussar is a Jewish spiritual discipline that helps to nurture depth of soul and spirit. Guiding us through life's daily struggles and blessings, Mussar has much wisdom to offer as we seek to nurture our character and develop our souls. Through the exploration of these ancient Jewish teachings, we learn to engage in the practice of mindful living, bringing balance, healing, inner-peace, and a deeper appreciation for life's struggles and blessings.

Please join us for an introductory look at this powerful genre of Jewish instruction. Feel free to join for any one of the sessions or attend the entire series, as each lesson will stand on its own.

Wednesdays, January 23 – March 13, 7:30pm

Understanding Israeli Society through Song and Poetry

This course of study offers a fresh and fascinating examination of Israeli society since the birth of the State in 1948. Using the Zot Hashira Curriculum compiled by Rachel Korazim, we will be blessed to examine the leading poets, writers, and musicians of Israel during its first six decades of existence. By carefully listening to the authentic voices of Israeli writers and examining Israeli society in its original context through the use of literature, song, and historical context through the use of power point presentations, we will take a close look at Israeli society from some of its most accomplished poets and writers. Reflections of Israel are both self-critical and proud, offering insight into the Israeli national psyche during much of its existence. The curriculum includes works by Yitzhak Shalev, Rachel, Nathan Alterman, Yehuda Amichai, Ephraim Kishon, Balfour Hakak, Lysie Doron and Amos Oz.

Wednesdays, March 27, April 3, 10, 24, May 1, 8, 7:30pm

Charoset

For most of us, this essential Passover Seder food calls to mind chopped apples, walnuts, cinnamon, and of course, our favorite Manischewitz wine (which can taste strangely similar to cough syrup!). But, did you know that there are many different types of charoset that can be found at Jewish Seders around the world?

Come and join us in our kitchen as we create and sample a variety of charoset recipes and learn about the history of this dish. If you have a unique and different recipe that you would like to share, please send it to Pam at pamc@torat-el.org and she will compile them for you to bring home and try!

If you have severe nut allergies, we will have a separate station to create a "nut free" charoset as well. Bring a friend and bring an appetite! We look forward to cooking with you. For planning purposes please make your reservation at www.torat-el.org or call the office at 732-531-4410.

Meet Adam Valen Levinson, author of The Abu Dhabi Bar Mitzvah

Armed only with college Arabic and restless curiosity, our author set out to “learn about the world 9/11 made us fear.” From a base in Abu Dhabi, he lunches in Taliban territory in Afghanistan, travels under the watchful eye of Aleppo’s secret police, and risks shipwreck en route to Somalia.

Traveling through many Islamic countries, Levinson finds that people who pray differently often laugh the same and he learns that we cannot live by decisions born of fear.

Adam Valen Levinson is an affiliate of the Middle East Institute in Washington, D.C., and a fellow at the Center for Cultural Sociology at Yale University, where he studies humor as a key to cultural understanding.
