ON NOT BLENDING IN

On October 18, an essay written by a woman named Heather Libman Kafetz circulated widely on social media. Entitled "I Am A Quiet American Jew," the author shared that prior to October 7, she had always been a quiet American Jew. I am not religious. I am not kosher. My children do not go to a Jewish day school, and I do not go to synagogue on most Shabbats. Instead, I quietly celebrate the high holidays, quietly respond "thank you" when a stranger wishes me a Merry Christmas at Hanukkah time, quietly pray to God when I am really desperate and quietly thank God for all of the blessings in my life. I quietly try to instill a love of Judaism in my children, while quietly hoping that they will gain this love without putting in much effort. And certainly, I never publicly declare or display my love of Judaism or Israel, because, after all, I am just a quiet American Jew.

But since the war in Israel began, the author writes:

Something has awakened inside of me. A profound love and connection to my people, to my brothers and sisters in Israel, and to the generations who came before me... And most importantly, I have awakened to the realization that I no longer have the luxury of being a quiet American Jew. None of us do.

As we come around to the holiday of Purim once again, these words resonate quite strongly. To quickly recap, Purim celebrates the victory of an assimilated Diaspora Jewish community over the wicked Haman. The story begins with Queen Vashti's refusal to dance before a drunken King Ahashverosh at a royal banquet, which in turn sets the stage for Esther to be chosen as Queen. Shortly thereafter, King Ahashverosh appoints Haman as grand vizier and all of the king's courtiers kneel and bow before Haman. When Mordechai refuses to bow down, Haman becomes so enraged that he plots to destroy Mordechai and all of the Jews throughout the kingdom. Fortunately, Esther and Mordechai devise a plan to save the Jews. Esther comes before the king, wines and dines him, reveals that she is Jewish, and pleads for her people. At the end, the tables are turned, Haman is hanged, and the Jewish people in the kingdom of Shushan are saved from his evil plot and live happily ever after.

Towards the beginning of the story, Esther, whose name literally means "hidden," was quite literally "the quiet Persian Jew." When Mordechai first asked her to appear before the king without being summoned, Esther balked at the suggestion, preferring not to "cause a scene." Gently, Mordechai rebuked her, saying:

Do not imagine that you, of all the Jews, will escape with your life by being in the king's palace. On the contrary; if you keep silent in this crisis, relief and deliverance will come to the Jews from another quarter, while you and your father's house will perish. And who knows, perhaps you have attained to royal position for just such a crisis. (Esther 4:13-14)

This year, perhaps more than most, Esther's choice to courageously stand up for her people calls to us as a challenge in this post-October 7 world. As the weeks, turn into months and the challenges to Israel and the Jewish people continue, as we arrive at the "joyous" festival of Purim feeling a lack of both joy and control, let us remember the truth of Esther's story. We can always make the choice to be a proud American Jew. We can always make the choice to take our Judaism seriously, to live our lives Jewishly each and every day, not only through standing up for our people and our nation, but through the way that we act as Jews, proudly and publicly each and every day. The story of Esther reminds us that there are moments in life when we dare not remain hidden in our comfortable palaces in life whose false sense of security is just that. There are moments when we have to stand up for our beliefs, stand up for our values, stand up for our people – even, and perhaps especially, when that is hard.

What are you are doing, each day, to live proudly as a Jew? What new mitzvah, what new spiritual practice might you consider taking on, to both bring personal meaning in your life, and to stand with your people during these difficult days? How can you continue to stand with Israel during this time? If you feel a lack of education about some of the challenges in Israel right now, what can you do, proactively, to educate yourself as you work to both understand, and stand with, the people of Israel (see my January article for more on that!)?

This Purim, may we, like Esther before us, find the courage to step up and stand out as Israel faces this existential crisis. May we have the strength to face this distressing moment of living as a Jew amidst a resurgence of anti-Semitism in this country with resilience and grace. And during this season that is typically filled with "joy," may we look to create moments of laughter and celebration even when that feels impossible, standing proudly with our people and living our lives as active, committed, and serious Jews, each and every day.

Sunday, March 17, 11:00am

Meet Lisa Belkin, author of Genealogy of a Murder

On Independence Day weekend in 1960 a young cop is murdered in Stamford, Connecticut. In this exploration of that crime, the author examines how three immigrant families became entwined – one Irish, one Italian, and one Jewish – and how each of them experienced the American Dream and the obstacles they encountered in pursuing that dream. This brilliantly researched book explores immigration, religion, prison reform, the nature/nurture debate and even the history of motorcycle racing, as well as the coincidences and choices that led to that one fateful night.

Lisa Belkin's career spans three decades – at the New York Times Magazine, the Life's Work column, and the Motherlode blog. She is the author of four non-fiction books, one of which was made into an HBO miniseries.
